Dear Andrew,

Re: Cross Submissions on Options Paper for Information Disclosure

Greymouth notes submissions received focus on information concerning planned and unplanned outages, and impacts on users of that – both experienced and potential.

Greymouth is participating in industry efforts to create a disclosure protocol for upstream outages.

In line with the views expressed in submissions, and assuming that the upstream industry discussions deliver a satisfactory protocol, Greymouth considers that GIC should issue a further options paper with a more refined problem definition of other issues raised in the consultation paper.

While we understand the potential financial impact on the market (ref: Haast Energy's cross submission), enhanced supply information will not create more gas supply. This is the real issue for the energy industry.

Yours sincerely
